Conclusion 40
On 30-Jan-2020, the Government notified a small but important change regarding organisations exempt from FCRA. Then just eight months later, the Government revised several key provisions of FCRA in a matter of just 15 days. The changes became effective from 29-September 2020. Shortly afterwards, several Rules and all the forms were revised, effective 10-Nov-2020.

This updated Guidance Note looks at these changes in 2020 and what they might or might not mean for Charities in India.

1. No Transfers or Sub-grants

Beginning 29-Sep-2020, it is no longer legal for FCRA-licensed entities to retransfer foreign contribution to other entities in India for program activities. It doesn’t matter whether these other entities have FCRA registration/prior-permission or not. Every FCRA-approved entity must spend the foreign contribution on their own. The restriction covers money, material and securities. This is one of the two most critical changes in FCRA (see box: NGO Networks and FCRA).

a. Payments to For-Profits

This restriction applies whether the second or subsequent receiver is a not-for-profit or a for-profit entity. This also applies whether the payment is a donation, grant or is made through a service contract. This means surrogate grants clothed in service contracts should not be made. If discovered and proven, these can result in

3 Any person with FCRA registration or prior-permission
4 Sec. 7 of FCRA
5 Sec. 2(1)(a) of FCRA. The term ‘association’ is wide enough to cover all forms of organisation (LLPs, Companies, Firms, Cooperatives, Producer Companies, etc.), and not just NGOs and not-for-profits. Though FCRA is applicable, registration or permission is granted rarely, if ever to for-profits. Payments to individuals, HUFS, and sec. 25 companies are also covered through sec. 2(1)(m). penalties under sec. 35.

However, payments in the ordinary course of business are not restricted. Examples include payment of consultancy fees or charges to schools, hospitals, training centres, etc., or payments for goods and services purchased for the organisation’s own use. Clandestine transfer of foreign contribution through service agreements where nominal services are availed or inflated costs/charges are paid, should not be attempted. If detected, these can result in prosecution under FCRA.

b. Program vs. Services

How does one know whether a Service Contract is for executing program activities or for purchasing services for programs in the ordinary course of business? There are at least four tests one can apply:

1. Who receives the services/benefits? The client/buyer or someone else?
2. Is there a direct connection between the recipients of the services and the client? For example, are these employees, grantees, or other associates of the client/buyer? Or is the connection a very tenuous one?
3. Are the recipients nominated by the client/buyer or does the service provider have wide discretion in selecting them?
4. How much discretion does the consultant/vendor have in execution of the work? To what extent does the client/customer direct or supervise the outcome of the activities?

In principle, where the client/customer is not receiving the services for itself, for its employees or for its grantees/associates, there is a risk that the activity could be a program activity. This risk is reduced if the service provider has limited discretion in selecting the beneficiaries, in executing the activities or is supervised closely by the client/customer. In case of doubt, competent advice should be obtained.

c. Service Contracts with Foreign NGOs

If the contract is with an overseas client or customer, then additional restrictions come into play. For example, an FCRA NGO in India (or a foreign source with business operations in India) can give you a contract to build houses for the poor. However, an overseas INGO cannot. This would amount to the overseas organisation executing program activities in India through an agent, without FCRA registration.

The same restriction applies to INGOs who have liaison offices in India. They can buy services for their own use — but not for executing program activities in India. If they have a branch office and want to execute program activities, they will need FCRA registration to do so.

6 Explanation 3 to Sec.2(1)(h)
7 For example, subsidiary of a foreign company in India building houses under CSR 8 This appears to be the alleged violation behind CBI registering an FIR in the case of an overseas donor contracting a local builder to build houses for the poor in Kerala.
d. Regranting to Exempt Entities

The prohibition placed in sec. 7 is complete and total. This means regranting foreign contribution to an entity exempt from FCRA under section 50 will also be a violation of sec. 7. Examples include regranting of foreign contribution to Swacch Bharat Kosh, PM-CARES Fund, Government-owned hospitals, Municipal Corporations, etc. (see Exempt Government Entities on page 34 for more on this).

e. Placing Personnel in India

These restrictions also come into play if a foreign NGO appoints consultants/personnel in India directly or through an HR agency. This is within the law if these persons are providing only non-binding advisory support for grant-making, monitoring, coordinating, etc. However, if these individuals are involved in program implementation or in execution of program activities, then they will need FCRA registration.

f. Assets created out of FC

The Sec. 7 restriction is on transfer of FC covers funds, material and securities received by a person. It also covers interest and other income derived from FC. But what about fixed assets or equipment purchased out of FC? Does the restriction cover transfer of these also?

There is a view that the restriction applies only to foreign contribution as such. It ceases to apply once the FC changes form into fixed assets, equipment, vehicles, property, etc. Therefore, an NGO with FCRA registration can still transfer these to other NGOs which have FCRA. Is this view correct?

It could be if this was Income Tax Act, where in case of ambiguity, the view favouring the taxpayer is preferred. However, in the case of FCRA, this interpretation will create a black hole for FC to disappear. People may be tempted to convert FC into non-FC, by simply buying fixed assets with foreign contribution and then giving them away. The receivers can then sell these off, and realise the funds as non-FC. If the FCRA Dept. doesn’t act to stop this, it will become an official loophole, defeating the very purpose of FCRA. For all these reasons, any equipment, assets, investments, etc., created or derived from FC should be treated as foreign contribution, and subject to the sec. 7 restriction.

g. Conversion of Organisation Form

What happens if an FCRA-registered trust or society converts into a sec. 8 company? Will transfer of assets or funds to the new company be a violation of sec. 7?

9 As stated by PM CARES Fund on its website — FCRA notification not available in public domain.
10 In some cases, this can result in creation of a Permanent Establishment (PE), with unexpected tax and compliance challenges.
11 FCRA is applicable to individuals undertaking program activities with foreign contribution. However, registration or permission is rarely granted.
12 Sec. 2(1)(h)
13 Explanation 1 to Sec. 2(1)(h). Before this explanation was added, some people erroneously believed that interest earned on FC endowments or secondly income was not treated as FC.
Under present law, though conversion is permitted in theory, it is rare in practice, with approvals required from Registrar of Societies and Income Tax Department, among others. You also have to file form FC-6B with FCRA Dept. for updating change in registration of the organisation. It is possible that the FCRA Department may ask you for additional information, before approving the change.

Coming to the main question, change in form of organisation doesn’t result in a violation of sec. 7, as there is no transfer of funds or assets to another entity. It is only a change in the form of organisation. However, this is not a road that many people have walked before — you will probably have to beat your own path for this to happen.

h. Mergers & Takeovers

The above principle doesn’t apply where two NGOs merge into a third one. Firstly the newly formed entity needs a new FCRA registration (as well as other approvals under Income Tax). Secondly, foreign contribution and assets of the old entities cannot be transferred to the new one without tripping over FCRA. The only solution would be to first sell off all the FCRA assets, utilise all the FCRA funds (including the sale proceeds), and then merge the non-FCRA parts that remain along with their identities.

Similar complications will arise in case one FCRA NGO wants to takeover another which has FCRA. The second NGO must first use up all its foreign contribution, before it can be absorbed by the first one.

i. Making Direct Disbursals

Section 7 disallows sub-granting by an FCRA-licensed person to another person. Three conditions have to be fulfilled before section 7 is attracted:

1. The transfer must be made by an FCRA-licensed person or its agent.
2. The transfer must be made to a person involved in program activities or its agent.
3. The transfer must be donative in nature — meaning it should be free or at less than its true value.

Therefore, if a foreign source in India or overseas makes direct disbursals to sub-grantees, will the restriction still come into play? No — direct grants are still permitted.

What if funds meant for India are first received by another overseas entity, who passes these on to the sub-grantees as advised by a donor agency in India (which has FCRA registration)? If funds do not come to the FCRA donor agency at any stage, there will not be any violation of sec. 7.

14 Sec. 366 of Companies Act 2013
15 Or Charities Commissioner in some states
16 According to revised rule 17A, all such changes must be approved by FCRA before they can become effective.
17 In practice, formal mergers and takeovers of NGOs in India are extremely rare.
18 Non-binding recommendation
19 This defence may be challenged if the overseas entity is merely a proxy or a shell operated remotely by the Indian entity.
j. Off-shore Banking

What if an FCRA NGO opens a bank account overseas, receives the foreign contribution there, and disburses the funds from there to sub-grantees in India? Foreign bank accounts must be disclosed in the Income Tax Return of the signatories. Under FCRA, this will be treated as receiving foreign contribution in a non-FCRA bank account.

What if the donor agency opens a special bank account overseas, which is operated by the Indian NGO? The donor agency transfers the funds for India to the bank account, and disbursements can be authorised online by the Indian NGO’s staff, using the login ID and the password of the account holder. While this might sound like a good idea, in reality it is not. Such bank accounts are treated as benami foreign bank accounts, and can attract penal provisions under FCRA, FEMA and Income Tax Act.

k. Off-shore Granting

In some cases, donors make a large grant to an overseas fund, which is managed by a specialised grant management consultancy or disbursement agent, also based overseas. This allows the donors to insulate themselves from publicity as well as the paperwork of making many small grants. Sometimes the overseas agent may have an arrangement with Indian consultants or NGOs who advise them on the grants to be made to Indian NGOs (which have FCRA registration).

!

This kind of setup continues to be legitimate. Care should be taken to ensure that the grant recommendations made by domestic consultants or NGOs are non-binding.

l. Reimbursements

Does the restriction also cover reimbursement of expenses? This depends on what kind of expenses are being reimbursed. For example, if you ask a friend to book a train ticket for you, and later pay the amount, that is reimbursement, and would be permitted. However, if you ask a person to undertake program activities on your behalf, collect bills in your name, and then settle the amount, this is not ‘reimbursement’. Here the mechanism is being confused with the purpose. In the first case, the purpose is merely convenience. In the second, the purpose is bypassing FCRA. Therefore the second should be avoided.

m. Advances

A related question being raised frequently is that of advances for expenses. Is there any restriction on giving advances out of FCRA funds to staff or others? The answer is yes and no. If the advances are given to your employees or vendors in the ordinary course of business, then there is no problem. However, if these are given to other NGOs for taking up program activities, with the bills being submitted later and accounted in your books, this would be a violation. This restriction also applies if people from other NGOs are ‘appointed’ as your employees, and advances given to them in place of a sub-grant.

n. Direct Implementation

The other valid option FCRA donor agencies in India are left with is direct implementation. To do so, they will need to terminate their existing grant agreements with partners, and then recruit people directly. Some of these people might be ex-employees of their former partners, who are appointed by the donor agency. This will also raise several HR and logistics complications, including pay-scales, provident fund, gratuity, etc.

In some cases, the entire staff complement of a former NGO partner might join the FCRA donor agency as staff. If so, care should be taken to ensure that these staff do not project the name of their former employer in the field, as this can be seen as shadow-lending under FCRA.

What about the cap on administration expenses if additional staff is taken on? This has to be examined on a case-by-case basis, as discussed under ‘Lower Cap on Administrative Expenses’ below.

2. Lower Cap on Administrative Expenses

The 2006 FCRA Bill proposed a limit of 30% for administrative expenses. Many NGOs protested this, even though most spend just 10-15% on administrative expenses. Another problem was figuring out what are administrative expenses. Expenses are generally tracked using traditional accounting heads like purchases, travel, salaries, rent, etc. These are not tracked using a functional classification (administration, marketing, research, etc). Audited financial statements also do not offer this classification — the allocation process is too expensive and subjective — to be of any use for public disclosure.

In response to this, the Government made two changes in the final Act: one, it raised the limit to 50%; two, it added a definition of administrative expenses to the rules.\(^{20}\) The definition in rule 5 is not based on a functional classification — rather its uses traditional accounting heads:

\[\text{Rule 5. The following shall constitute administrative expenses:—}\

(i) salaries, wages, travel expenses or any remuneration realised by the Members of the Executive Committee or Governing Council of the person;

\(^{20}\) Normally, critical definitions are given in the Act itself and not in the rules.
(ii) all expenses towards hiring of personnel for management of the activities of the person and salaries, wages or any kind of remuneration paid, including cost of travel, to such personnel;

(iii) all expenses related to consumables like electricity and water charges, telephone charges, postal charges, repairs to premise(s) from where the organisation or Association is functioning, stationery and printing charges, transport and travel charges by the Members of the Executive Committee or Governing Council and expenditure on office equipment;

(iv) cost of accounting for and administering funds;

(v) expenses towards running and maintenance of vehicles;

(vi) cost of writing and filing reports;

(vii) legal and professional charges; and

(viii) rent of premises, repairs to premises and expenses on other utilities:

Provided that the expenditure incurred on salaries or remuneration of personnel engaged in training or for collection or analysis of field data of an association primarily engaged in research or training shall not be counted towards administrative expenses:

Provided further that the expenses incurred directly in furtherance of the stated objectives of the welfare oriented organisation shall be excluded from the administrative expenses such as salaries to doctors of hospital, salaries to teachers of school, etc.

Using the term ‘administrative expenses’ for these kinds of expenses, irrespective of their purpose, causes confusion. Most people are led to believe that whatever is not program spending will be administrative expenses.

Use of ambiguous phrases such ‘personnel for management of the activities’ also adds to the confusion. Does this mean ‘management’ in an hierarchical sense, or does it mean all the staff who implement the activities? The ambiguity of the rule is such that it could be interpreted either way. In a restrictive sense it would mean salaries of only the managers, officers, and other responsible for supervising or guiding. In an expansive sense, it could mean that all staff salaries are part of

The Reason for Capping

On 19-Aug-2010, while replying to a Rajya Sabha debate on the FCRA Bill, Mr. P. Chidambaram, the Minister for Home Affairs stated:

‘The regulations have been so framed that while legitimate charitable, social, educational, medical and activity that serves any public purpose is allowed, foreign money does not dominate social and political discourse in India. There is enough money for charity within India. Enough money can be raised within India for charitable causes, the social causes. But, if you want to access foreign money, then one has to come under a system of regulation.’ [Emphasis added]

Once the FCRA 2010 became law, the Home Secretary made this even clearer in 2013:

‘The general policy of the Government of India is not to encourage soliciting of foreign contribution. However, if it is intended for bonafide welfare activities, foreign contribution can be received either by obtaining registration or prior permission from the Central Government under the FCRA 2010.’ [Emphasis added]

And to ensure this, the Government capped spending on salaries, overheads, etc., to 50% of the total foreign contribution utilised.

However, the restriction has not really been enforced. In fact, till 2015, FCRA department did not even ask for administrative expenses to be reported. Even after reporting was added to form FC-4 in Dec-15, the Department has not clamped down so far on over-spending. No one has been asked to pay compounding fees — or lost their FCRA due to non-compliance. Therefore, while NGOs have occasionally worried about the 50% cap, they’ve not really changed their approach.
‘administrative expenses’. It would not matter whether the staff are part of the management or are field workers.

Whether you read the rule in a restrictive sense or an expansive sense, there are two exceptions to this:

1. If the organisation is primarily engaged in research or training, then salaries, fees, honorarium of trainers, data collectors, and data analysts, will be excluded from ‘administrative expenses’.

2. If the organisation is welfare-oriented (such as a hospital or a school), then all expenses incurred directly on promoting its objects will be excluded from administrative expenses.

The definition of administrative expenses is a precise definition, as it uses the word ‘constitutes’. Therefore any expenditure that is not specifically mentioned in rule 5 should not be reported as ‘administrative expenses’, irrespective of whether it is for program, fund-raising, or anything else. Some examples of such expenses are:

- Purchase of capital items, vehicles, building, etc.
- Insurance of assets or for staff
- Medicines, books, and other items for distribution among communities
- Commission on funds raised from donors
- Travel, conveyance or meal expenses to participants/beneficiaries/resource persons
- Advertisement and publicity expenses
- Registration/renewal fees
- Interest paid to bank, bank charges
- Hospitality expenses, etc.

With this background, let us look a little closely at the exceptions in Rule 5:

a. Research

Firstly, what kind of research is exempt under the rule? Research can take many forms, can cover different topics and lead to a wide variety of results. Statistical research and surveys on matters such as formal education, health, sanitation, nutrition, housing, employment, etc., have relatively less scope of influencing political or social discourse and appear to be safe. However, qualitative or interpretative research into issues such as governance, government policies, gender, judiciary, legislation, electoral matters, budgetary allocations, caste, communal,

---

21 In at least two cases, the FCRA Department’s cancellation order indicates that salaries of all the staff is being included in administrative expenses. For Greenpeace India Society, administrative expenses were pegged at 81-88% (order dated 2-Sep-2015). For Sabrang Trust, these were calculated at 55-64% (order dated 16-Jun-2016).

22 If so, then by not distinguishing salaries of program and administrative staff, this rule disallows what the Parliament has allowed through the Act.

23 This proviso supports the argument that all staff salaries are counted as administrative expenses. Otherwise this proviso would not be required at all.
religious, or cultural issues, law and order, social discrimination, civil rights, environment, displacement, etc., are much more sensitive and may not be what the government means by research here (see box: ‘Research: Academic or Subversive?’).

Secondly, there are two conditions to be fulfilled for the first proviso to rule 5:

1. The organisation should be primarily engaged in research; and,
2. The concerned staff should be engaged in collection or analysis of field data.

A common question being asked by many NGOs is whether they can exclude the salaries of their policy and advocacy teams from administrative expenses? These NGOs should check whether they are mainly engaged in research. If the answer is ‘yes’, they should identify the staff who are ‘engaged in collection or analysis of field data’. Salaries of such staff can be excluded from administrative expenses. Salary of people engaged in managing or directing research, in theorising, writing research papers, or in policy, advocacy, etc., cannot be excluded.

b. Training

Firstly, training can also be of various types, especially in the NGO sector. Training people in handicrafts, mechanical, technical skills, vocations, or skills of particular trades (computers, carpentry, tailoring, plumbing, hospitality, arts, business, etc.) would

Research: Academic or Subversive?

The traditional conception of research is mostly of an academic activity, conducted by chalk-dusty professors or white-coated scientists. This kind of research takes a long time to percolate into main-stream thought or turn into commercial products. However, with more and more academicians thinking about impact of their work, research has become increasingly current and applied. NGO research is one variety of such applied research.

This research is often incidental to different kinds of NGO programs, especially modern ones which tend to be more cerebral and strategic. Sometimes NGO research cuts across multiple areas of CREES (cultural, religious, economic, educational and social). For example, an NGO seeking to improve economic conditions of the poor might take up research into migration patterns or pastoral communities, or examine the impact of government policies on the poor. It might also look into impact of cultural practices, such as early marriage and drop-out rates on earning capacity of families. Another NGO working on, say, sustainable tourism, might look into impact of mass pilgrimages on local economy, environment or community.

This also raises the related question of what kind of FCRA registration (cultural, religious, economic, educational and social) should the NGO have (Form FC-3A). NGOs mustn’t get into areas for which they are not registered under FCRA. If their research isn’t aligned to their FCRA registration, they may have to file form FC-6B.

The results of the research might be held internally for designing better programs or these might be published to influence public opinion or change government policy. Publication can have unexpected consequences and trigger clamour for inquiry into the funding for the research. Therefore, a cool-headed risk-assessment of any research for publication is always a good idea. Three critical questions to consider before publishing are:

- Does the research go into religious, political, governance, or cultural issues?
- Will particular interest groups be adversely affected by the research?
- What actions can be triggered by such groups against the NGO?

With regard to administrative expenses, what kind of research does rule 5 talk about? There are no guidelines anywhere. In fact, it is not even clear whether research is covered by FCRA, and if so, where does it fit into the CREES scheme of things. According to one booklet (A Handbook on FCRA, MHA & ICAI, 2005), FCRA Department seems to think that research is part of ‘education’. However, rule 5 itself implies that ‘research’ can be a stand-alone activity or connected with training. Exempting expenses on research designed to influence public or government policy would contradict the former Home Minister’s statement regarding foreign influence on ‘social and political discourse’ (see box: ‘Reason for Capping’, page 11). Therefore, it is a fair guess that FCRA Department is talking about exempting only academic research or statistical surveys in the first proviso to rule 5.
appear to be fine. However, training in rights-based issues, gender matters, socio-political analysis, governance, activism, or activities such as organising, mobilising, cadre-building, awareness generation (e.g., on government policies), etc., would most likely not be covered by the term training.

Secondly, there are two conditions to be fulfilled for the first proviso to rule 5 with regard to training:

1. The organisation should be primarily engaged in training; and,
2. The concerned staff should be performing the role of trainers.

Therefore, an organisation which is not primarily engaged in training does not qualify at all. For such organisations, the salaries of trainers will also not be excluded from administrative expenses.

If you find an organisation which is primarily focused on training (of the right kind, as discussed above), you can take the second step: identify staff who are trainers. Salaries of only such people can be excluded from administrative expenses — salaries, fees of other staff (e.g., Training Coordinator) cannot be excluded.

What if an NGO arranges training for its own staff on program or financial issues? Will this be treated as administrative expenditure or program expenditure? Rule 5 is silent on this — only fees paid to trainers/resource persons could be covered under legal and professional charges, if the trainers are lawyers or practising professionals. Therefore, such expenses should not be reported under administrative expenses.

c. Welfare-Oriented?

What is a welfare-oriented organisation? Just like politics, this term too is not defined anywhere in Indian law. However, in NGO circles, some organisations are called ‘welfare or service delivery organisations’ whereas as others are said to be ‘rights-based organisations’ (see box ‘Welfare vs. Rights’).

Welfare vs. Rights

According to a particularly lucid comparison, the welfare model of development focuses on three basic questions:

1. How are the public goods or technical knowledge delivered to the poor?
2. What is the missing input or catalyst — seeds, nutrition, or family planning strategy — that will power development?
3. Which crucible — state-led infrastructure expansion and industrialisation, or the market — can most efficiently reduce poverty and spur development?

The welfare model is contrasted with the rights-based approach which:

‘… envisions the poor as actors with the potential to shape their own destiny and defines poverty as social exclusion that prevents such action. Instead of focusing on creating an inventory of public goods or services for distribution and then seeking to fill any deficit via foreign aid, the rights-based approach seeks to identify the key systemic obstacles that keep people from accessing opportunity and improving their own lives (Center for Economic and Social Rights, 1995). From the very outset, the focus is on structural barriers that impede communities from exercising rights, building capabilities, and having the capacity to choose.’

Thus, while the welfare approach uses foreign aid to offer goods, services and benefits directly to the poor as charity, the rights-based approach organises the poor to demand these from the Government as a matter of right. Rights-based approach bristles at the poor getting benefits as Capitalist charity, but shies away from the total revolution which Communists want. It, therefore, alarms the Right and is despised by the Left.

Even though the rights-based approach is rather esoteric, it has become quite popular with many FCRA-registered NGOs over the last twenty years. The number of rights, sub-rights and their relatives has also multiplied over the years, often leaving the Government bewildered. In some cases, NGO actions based on rights-based approach have made it difficult for governments and industry to build infrastructure or set up industrial projects in rural areas. At the same time, NGOs find it difficult to understand why does the Government reject an approach that it has signed up for as part of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights. This distinction appears to be the key to unlocking the mysterious ‘welfare-oriented organisations’ of rule 5 of FCRR 2011. These are NGOs which use foreign contribution for providing, material, services, technical know-how and other benefits directly to the poor and the needy. They do not ask the State to do so. They do not talk about empowerment, entitlement, equity, exploitation or governance. Rather, they focus on providing education, employment, economic opportunity, and skilling. Any foreign contribution they spend directly on furthering their objectives will not be counted as administrative expenses, even it is towards salary, fees, travel, or rent (see box: ‘The Reason for Capping’).

Now with the jaw-dropping reduction in the limit to 20%, more attention is likely to given to this aspect of budgeting and program design by NGOs and donor agencies. The chart above shows how administrative expenses are determined for different types of NGOs. This should be used to check compliance with FCRA limit of 20% as explained in the following paragraphs.

24 UN General Assembly, 1948
d. The Six Step Solution

Though rule 5 is fairly clear in its own way, most NGOs get confused as they think of this as administration vs. programs. Rule 5 does not use this dichotomy. It just says what administrative expenses are. To calculate these correctly, you should take the following steps:

1. Sit in front of a computer. Take a deep breath. Exhale. Clear your mind of all preconceived notions of what is administration and what is program.

2. Figure out nature of your organisation (see headings a-c above). There are four options:
   i. You are primarily into training.
   ii. You are primarily into research.
   iii. You are a welfare-oriented organisation.
   iv. You are none of the above.

3. List all your FCRA expenses for the year in one worksheet (columns A & B). You should ideally do this on cash-basis, using the Receipts & Payments Accounts. This is your total FCRA utilisation for the year.

   Step 3: List all FCRA Expenses

4. Enter all the administrative expenses (as described in the eight heads in rule 5) in adjacent column C. Please match the description and nature of expense carefully with rule 5. For example, consultancy fee is not covered under ‘Legal and Professional Charges’ unless the consultants are lawyers or are practising a recognised profession (e.g., accountancy, engineering, medical, architecture, company secretarialship, etc.).26 Incidentally, people with degrees such MSW, MBA, PhD, etc., should not be included under item vii of rule 5, as these are qualifications, not professions.

26 However, if these people are working as employees or on full-time consultancy contracts, then the payment is covered under item ii of rule 5 as remuneration to employees.

Do not apply any exceptions at this stage. The total of this column is your final administrative expenses — unless you fall into category i, ii, or iii (step 1).

5. If you are in one of the first three categories, apply the relevant exceptions. For example, research organisations should move salaries, remuneration, etc., of the data collectors and field data analysts from column C to column D. Training organisations should move remuneration paid to trainers from column C to column E.

Step 5: Move Exempt Expenses (Training/Research Organisations)

Welfare-oriented organisations should move all amounts spent directly on furthering their objects from column C to column F.
6. The amount that remains in column C is your administrative expenses. A listing of these expenses, and their description should be provided as a note to FCRA audited statements for reference and record, as shown here.

The worksheet is for internal record only. It should be printed and kept in a file for future reference.

e. Cross-border Payments to Employees

Can an INGO or foreign donor agency make direct payments to employees based in India? This depends on the role and number of persons based in India. For instance, if they are working with the overseas office for supporting international operations, this doesn’t create an FCRA issue.

However, if such a person/s are working for an FCRA-NGO in India, the direct payments might be seen as an attempt to bypass the restriction on administrative expenses. If these people are working for a non-FCRA NGO in India, then this can be viewed as a method of financing the NGO in India, and thus a violation of FCRA. The same concept applies to the INGO or overseas agency paying directly for office space or various facilities for the Indian NGO.

27 Sometimes employees are appointed as full-time consultants through consultancy contracts. This does not change the legal implications discussed here.

28 From a literal point of view, contribution of services is not foreign contribution, as these are not money, material or securities. However, regulators are often able to show that this is merely a mechanism to bypass the restriction on transfer of money. There is the additional risk of creating a Permanent Establishment for the overseas NGO, which has its own painful implications. Therefore, such stratagems should be avoided.
f. Allocating Staff Salaries to Program Activity

Some organisations allocate one part of the salary of CEO and other staff to administrative expenses and the balance to program expenses. While this is a fair approach from a functional classification perspective, it is not valid in the present situation as rule 5 does not allow such allocation of expenses. If a person is covered by clause i or clause ii of rule 5, then his/her entire remuneration, travel, etc. should be treated as administrative expenses, unless the organisation is a welfare-oriented organisation.29

g. Changing Staff Designations

Rule 5 allows NGOs to exclude salaries of trainers, researchers, etc., from administrative expenses. What if an NGO changes the designation of some of their staff to trainers, researchers, etc.? Can they exclude the salaries of such staff from administrative expenses? As discussed earlier, this works only if:

   a. The organisation is primarily engaged in training and research; and,
   b. If the staff are actually performing the roles specified in rule 5.

If this is not the case, then such cosmetic changes will not help.

h. Using non-FC funds for Administrative Expenses

Can an NGO pay for some of the administrative expenses in an FC-funded project out of non-FC funds? Yes, — as long as the NGO:

   a. Makes the payment for these from non-FC bank accounts;
   b. Keeps the expenses in non-FC books; and,
   c. Ensures there is no inter-fund transfer between FC and non-FC.

This will allow the NGO to reduce its administrative expenditure in FC funds, without breaking the law.

i. Seeking FCRA Approval for Higher Spending

If nothing works, and your administrative expenses cannot be kept within 20%, then you must apply to FCRA Department for permission to spend more. This must be done in advance, before you actually overspend the money. There is no defined procedure for this, so you should apply by email, with proper justification for why you should be allowed to spend more. It is not known how long will the department take to approve or decline the permission. Therefore, you should apply as early as possible.

j. Compounding

What happens if you overshoot the 20% limit? The FCRA Department may condone this once in three years, after you pay 5% of the overspent amount as compounding fees. However, this is at the discretion of the Department. If they do not offer compounding option (or if you decline it), then you can lose your FCRA registration.

29 See 'Welfare-Oriented?' for more on this.
k. Effective Date

As the Act was amended on 29-Sep-2020, some people think that the limit will be 50% for the period 1-Apr-20 to 28-Sep-20. For the second half of the year (29-Sep-20 to 31-Mar-21), the limit will be 20%. The argument is that people might have already committed or spent funds in the first half according to the 50% limit. While this is a valid consideration from a practical point of view, there is no support for this in the FCRA provisions or notifications so far. Therefore, if you find that you are stuck with high spending (>20%) in the first half, you should either try and balance it out in the second half or apply for FCRA approval for higher spending in FY 20-21.

3. FCRA Renewal

The new change to FCRA requires that each renewal application has to be processed almost like an application for fresh registration. The FCRA Department has to make sure that the applicant meets all the conditions laid down in sec. 12(4). This may require getting fresh IB reports on the applicant, as well as their board members. NGOs whose board members are residing abroad could face even longer delays if the FCRA Department asks for their verification.30 The Department will also have to check that the applicant has not defaulted on FCRA compliance in the past. While computerisation helps, the human element is critical in processing FCRA applications, as this is an internal security law, and each case is unique to some extent.

All this means that renewals could get delayed (see box: ‘Rebirth and Renewal’). It is possible that the FCRA Department might extend the validity period as it did last time — it is also equally possible that it may not. And once the FCRA validly expires, NGOs will not be able to receive fresh contribution. In some cases, they might not even be able to spend what they have already received.31

Clearly, the winter of 2021 could be a very cold one for many NGOs. It is therefore important that NGOs apply as early as possible. The revised rules allow NGOs to apply only during the last six months of their FCRA registration.32 Therefore, NGOs can only file their application on 1 May 2021, if their registration is valid till 31 October 2021. While filing the renewal application they must also provide Darpan ID, SBI Account details and Aadhar number of all board members and key functionaries (including CEO, COO, etc.).33

They should also make sure that the application is filled up correctly, has all the required information and documents (including especially the affidavits from all board members), and

30 This is usually coordinated through the Indian Embassy or High Commission abroad.
31 At least one bank is reportedly freezing FCRA designated accounts completely when FCRA registration expires, even if the renewal application has been filed in time and is being processed. See ‘Delayed Approval’ for more on this.
32 Rule 12(6)
that they are otherwise compliant in all respects. They should remain alert for FCRA requests (SMS and email) for additional information.

No Application

What happens if you don’t apply for FCRA? In the past, this meant that you could no longer receive fresh FC, but continue to use what you had already received, as well as the assets you had built up with FC. This is especially relevant when an institution (e.g., a school or hospital) is started with foreign contribution but becomes self-sustaining after some years.

The new rules on non-application disrupt this equilibrium. If you don’t apply for renewal, you are required to renounce the world of FC totally — surrender all your FC in cash, bank, deposits, investments as well as any assets to the Government, which will then hold and manage these. This vesting will continue till the time your certificate is renewed or you get fresh registration. In the meanwhile, the Government will have control over your FC buildings and manage these on behalf of the organisation.

Delayed Application

A delayed application can be filed up to one year after expiry of certificate. Additional fees of Rs. 5,000 must be paid in such cases. No FC can be accepted or used till the certificate is renewed. What’s more, all FC and FC-assets will vest with the Government till certificate is renewed.

Delayed Approval

What happens if you file your application in time, but the renewal doesn’t come through before expiry? According to the rules, you cannot accept any more foreign contribution (cash or kind) once your FCRA registration

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Rebirth and Renewal</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>By all accounts, taking birth is a frightening, once-in-a-lifetime experience. So it is for NGOs when they get their FCRA registration for the first time. Under the 1976 Act, once an NGO registered for FCRA, it was valid as long as it was not taken away by cancellation. The 2010 Act changed this. NGOs must get their FCRA registration renewed every five years. Apparently the idea behind this was to eliminate NGOs which became dormant after registering. It was expected that renewal would be granted almost automatically on application to an NGO, if there were no violations on record. Sec. 16 provides that:</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1. The Government shall grant the renewal, ordinarily within 90 days from date of application.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2. If the certificate is not renewed in 90 days, the Government shall share the reasons with the NGO.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3. Renewal may be refused only where the NGO has violated any provision of the Act or rules.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>

In practice, renewals are often delayed, sometimes by as much as two years after expiry of FCRA. In most cases of delay, there is no information about why it is delayed or when it might come through, other than the cryptic status message, “under processing”. It is not known how many NGOs have received an explicit refusal, though many appear to have suffered from the unending processing that their renewal seems to be going through. Yet, no NGO seems to have gone to court over this. There are also numerous cases where the renewal application is ‘deemed to be lapsed,’ because the concerned NGO failed to respond to the FCRA request for information in time.

To a very great extent, delays is due to a system overload. About 21,000 NGOs apply for renewal at the same time. All these applications have to be processed within 12 months (now reduced to six) by a Department which can probably allocate just about 5-7 people to this. This would mean that each person would have to process at least 20-25 applications a day for six months, even if each worked independently in a flat hierarchy. Mistakes and delays are bound to occur.

34 Make sure that you fill these up correctly in the renewal application are correct, and keep them live till the time renewal is granted.

35 Rule 12(5), (6) and (6A) of FCRR 2011. There is no direct authorisation in the Act for such extraordinary vesting of assets with the Government, even though this is a logical outcome of the Government’s policy.

36 Precedent for this is already set under laws in Tamil Nadu, Andhra Pradesh, Maharashtra, Rajasthan, Uttar Pradesh where religious and charitable property is managed by the State government in varying manners.
expires. It doesn’t matter that your renewal application is pending with the Department. Some banks may not allow you to even use the FC already in your bank account, as the rules on this are not clear.37

Due Date

In the past, NGOs were allowed to file their renewal application up to one year in advance. This duration has been reduced. Applications for renewal (form FC-3C) can be filed only six months in advance of expiry. However, all certificates do not expire on 31-October-2021. Some might expire before and some a little later. Please check and mark due date of expiry and renewal for your case carefully.

Fees

Fee for renewal has been increased to Rs. 5,000. In case of delayed application, additional Rs. 5,000 should be paid as late fee. All fees must be paid online at the time of filing FC-3C. An application without fees is treated as void. Renewal fees can be paid out of FCRA or non-FCRA funds.

4. Public Service and FCRA

FCRA places a total prohibition on civil servants, judiciary, government employees, politicians, etc., accepting any foreign contribution.38 These people are not permitted to even accept foreign hospitality39 while abroad, without prior approval from the Government. Journalists are also covered by the prohibition on accepting foreign contribution (though they don’t need permission for taking sponsored foreign trips). Thus all the four pillars of the democracy (Legislature, Executive, Judiciary, and the Media) are insulated from foreign influence. However, there is another pillar — public service — which is not as visible. This consists of thousands of public-spirited citizens and professionals helping the Government in many small but important ways. There are numerous Government commissions, committees and boards where non-official members and NGO representatives serve. To name just a few, these include:

37 According to newly inserted rule 12(5), no FC can be received or used once the old certificate expires.
38 Payments in the ordinary course of business (salaries, fees, royalty, etc.) are permitted.
39 Casual offers, such as a cup of tea or dinner are not restricted.
The Government appears to be of the view that foreign contribution should not corrode this invisible pillar. Therefore, it has amended sec. 3 of the FCRA to enlarge the restriction to include public servants as well. The term is defined in sec. 21 of Indian Penal Code 1860 (IPC) to include a wide variety of persons including those who perform any public duty:

Section 21. "Public servant".

The words "public servant" denote a person falling under any of the descriptions hereinafter following, namely:

Second. Every Commissioned Officer in the Military, Naval or Air Forces of India;

Third. Every Judge including any person empowered by law to discharge, whether by himself or as a member of any body of persons, any adjudicatory functions;

Fourth. Every officer of a Court of Justice (including a liquidator, receiver or commissioner) whose duty it is, as such officer, to investigate or report on any matter of law or fact, or to make, authenticate, or keep any document, or to take charge or dispose of any property, or to execute any judicial process, or to administer any oath, or to interpret, or to preserve order in the Court, and every person specially authorised by a Court of Justice to perform any of such duties;

Fifth. Every juryman, assessor, or member of a panchayat assisting a Court of Justice or public servant;

Sixth. Every arbitrator or other person to whom any cause or matter has been referred for decision or report by any Court of Justice, or by any other competent public authority;

Seventh. Every person who holds any office by virtue of which he is empowered to place or keep any person in confinement;

Eighth. Every officer of the Government whose duty it is, as such officer, to prevent offences, to give information of offences, to bring offenders to justice, or to protect the public health, safety or convenience;

Ninth. Every officer whose duty it is as such officer, to take, receive, keep or expend any property on behalf of the Government, or to make any survey, assessment or contract on behalf of the Government, or to execute any revenue-process, or to investigate, or to report, on any matter affecting the pecuniary interests of the Government, or to make, authenticate or keep any document relating to the pecuniary interests of the Government, or to prevent the infraction of any law for the protection of the pecuniary interests of the Government;

Tenth. Every officer whose duty it is, as such officer, to take, receive, keep or expend any property, to make any survey or assessment or to levy any rate or tax for any secular common purpose of any village, town or district, or to make, authenticate or keep any document for the ascertaining of the rights of the people of any village, town or district;

40 Sec. 21(12), and Explanation 1 of IPC. The word 'person' also includes Company, Association or body of persons, whether incorporated or not.
Eleventh. Every person who holds any office in virtue of which he is empowered to prepare, publish, maintain or revise an electoral roll or to conduct an election or part of an election;

Twelfth.--Every person --

(a) in the service or pay of the Government or remunerated by fees or commission for the performance of any public duty by the Government;

(b) in the service or pay of a local authority, a corporation established by or under a Central, Provincial or State Act or a Government company as defined in section 617 of the Companies Act, 1956 (1 of 1956).

Illustration

A Municipal Commissioner is a public servant.

Explanation 1. Persons falling under any of the above descriptions are public servants, whether appointed by the Government or not.

Explanation 2.--Wherever the words "public servant" occur, they shall be understood of every person who is in actual possession of the situation of a public servant, whatever legal defect there may be in his right to hold that situation.

Explanation 3.--The word "election" denotes an election for the purpose of selecting members of any legislative, municipal or other public authority, of whatever character, the method of selection to which is by, or under, any law prescribed as by election.

Clause 12 above includes any person who is getting paid by the Government (or a local authority, Government corporation or Government company) for performing any public service. Clause 12 also covers those who are performing a public service — even if they are not entitled to or drawing any remuneration. Thus the definition includes all the positions listed earlier. Most likely, it will also include nominees to bodies such as the former National Advisory Council under UPA II or expert groups set up by bodies such as the Niti Aayog.\(^{41}\)

\(^{41}\) Additionally, FCRA Department might even include attorney generals, public prosecutors, district counsels, as well as amicus curiae (who get a nominal fees for helping the court), although such an interpretation is quite contentious and will probably be fought vigorously.

The Panchatantra in FCRA

Panchatantra, popularly viewed as a set of stories for children, is actually an insightful look into pragmatic statecraft, and probably extraordinarily influential at a subconscious level. According to Patrick Olivelle:

“…Pañcatantra is a complex book that does not seek to reduce the complexities of human life, government policy, political strategies, and ethical dilemmas into simple solutions; it can and does speak to different readers at different levels. Indeed, the current scholarly debate regarding the intent and purpose of the Pañcatantra— whether it supports unscrupulous Machiavellian politics or demands ethical conduct from those holding high office—underscores the rich ambiguity of the text….”

It also offers us a valuable insight into power of money through the story of a mouse called Hiranyaka (हिरण्याक), who lived over a treasure hoard. The smell of gold gave him the confidence to jump several feet to reach the ascetic Tamrachooda’s alms, and feed his band of followers every day. One day, Tamrachooda (ताम्रचूड़) receives a guest called Brihatsphic (बृहत्सच्य), who helps him figure this out. Both follow the trail to Hiranyaka’s treasure and dig it out. Once Hiranyaka loses his treasure, he loses his aura, his jumping powers, and his band of followers.

This is not very different from what FCRA is trying to achieve, because, in the Panchatantra scheme of things:

अँधेरे व विहीनास्य पुरुषाः पुरुषात्माः।
उभिष्टार्थात् क्रिया: सर्वेऽऽण्ये कुप्रस्तति यथा॥९॥

Just as small mountain streams dry up in summer, so come to nought the wits and plans of a man without wealth. [91]

A related tweak is that related to corporations referred in sec. 3(1)(c). The restrictions on Government employees also cover those employed by any corporation. These people are not permitted to accept any foreign contribution or foreign hospitality. The word corporation has now been explained to mean only those corporations which are owned or controlled by the Government (Central or State), including Government companies.

a. Implications

The restriction is on public servants receiving foreign contribution during their tenure. There is no restriction on the NGOs associated with them who can continue receiving foreign contribution. These NGOs can also pay them fair remuneration for their actual services. However, proving that the remuneration was fair and it was for actual services can be tricky, even if the required permissions were in place. Therefore caution is advisable.

b. Tricks and Traps

People might try a number of ways to bypass these provisions. For instance, some might think of accepting the money as inflated reimbursement of expenses. Others might take the money surreptitiously in cash. Still others might think of accepting the payments in the name of a relative (or even in the name of trusted driver, who then passes on cash to them). Some may try to increase payment of rent to compensate themselves. All these tricks are well known to law enforcement agencies. If discovered, these can cause grave embarrassment as well as trigger prosecution. You should avoid these totally.

The best solution is for the public servants to resign from any paid position with FCRA NGOs during the period they hold a public office or perform a public duty. If not, the public servants should either not accept any payment from FCRA funds or they should ensure that the payments are for actual services, are properly documented and can withstand public gaze.

5. FCRA Gateway Banking

One unique and somewhat confusing change (see box: RBI vs. RTI) is that all FCRA NGOs must open a special bank account with SBI, New Delhi Main Branch for receiving

RBI vs. RTI

The central premise of FCRA 2010 is that access to foreign funds is the source of NGOs’ power to ‘influence social and political discourse’ in India. Therefore, control over banking channels is a critical mechanism for FCRA.

In 1985, the original FCRA was amended to ensure that NGOs received their foreign contribution only in one bank account, which was noted in MHA records. Depositing foreign contribution in any other account could lead to severe penalties (see CBI vs M. Kurian Chief Functionary of Comprehensive Rural Operations Services Society (CROSS); SC, 2001).

In 2011, this was relaxed somewhat by allowing NGOs to open secondary bank accounts for ease of utilisation in the field. In 2017, regulations were tightened again by asking all NGOs to keep their FCRA accounts in PFMS-compliant banks only. Still, there were cases where funds from prior-reference category donors would slip through. For those who don’t know, the prior-reference category is a list of some 20-25 foreign donors whose remittances must be cleared first by MHA, before these can be credited to the NGO, if at all. For some bureaucratic reason, the list is secret. And it is so secret that RBI has filed a case in Mumbai High Court to prevent it being made public (‘RBI seeks stay on CIC order on foreign donors in FCRA list,’ Livemint, 30-Nov-2018).

The latest change will help MHA ensure that the restrictions on sub-granting can be enforced more rigorously. It will also help prevent remittances from prior-reference category donors slipping through. Last — but not the least, there will be no need to send out the list of these donors to 60 banks.

foreign contribution. This can be a savings account or a current account. NGOs can open the SBI gateway account remotely, and have been given time till 31-Mar-21 to do so.

Once the SBI account is opened, the NGO should:

- Stop accepting fresh contribution in the present FCRA designated bank account.
- File FC-6C should be filed to update FCRA database for SBI account and the existing designated FCRA Account.

SBI will allow the NGO to start using the new account when form FC-6C is approved. After the funds are credited to SBI gateway account, these can be transferred to the NGO’s other FCRA accounts straight away or later, as required. Two types of accounts are allowed (in addition to the SBI FCRA Account):

1. Another FCRA Account

The existing FCRA-designated account can be converted into ‘another FCRA account’. This account can be used for keeping unused FC funds or for utilising these. No direct receipts of FC are allowed into this account. Details of this account should be updated in FCRA database by filing FC-6C.

2. Utilisation Account

The earlier system of utilisation accounts remains undisturbed. These accounts must be recorded with FCRA Department as utilisation accounts by filing FC-6D. To prevent wrong deposits into this account, you can ask the bank to allow only credits from SBI FCRA account and from other FCRA account. This is usually done by modifying the account opening resolution or by giving the bank instructions in writing later on.

The transition to SBI is not likely to be smooth. Firstly, KYC requirements for charities are relatively more stringent. Secondly, opening an account with a Nationalised Bank is always a memorable experience. Thirdly, remote branches of SBI, through which this account is to be opened, will wait for clear instructions from SBI HO (which may sometimes remain unread, even if received).

However, once the account has been opened, it is relatively easier to operate an account with SBI than with some other private or foreign banks. Also SBI is focused on banking only — they will not push various insurance, investment and loan products at you as done by private banks.

Therefore, though this move signals the Government’s tougher stance on FCRA, it is not likely to affect day-to-day NGO working in any significant way. However, the psychological impact of this change on NGOs might be immense (see box: ‘The Panchatantra and FCRA’).

Permitted Deposits

What should be deposited where? Is the SBI account meant only for fresh FC receipts or for other receipts of FC as well? The only thing that is clear is that nothing is clear regarding what should be deposited where. Still, based on sec. 17 and revised form FC-4, following seems to the scheme of things:

FCRA Changes 2020 Act & Rules

Managing FCRA Bank Accounts

a. Foreign Inward Remittances

Once the SBI FCRA account is operational, SBI NDMB will expect the following details for each foreign inward remittance:

1. ‘FCRA Account’ Number of the Beneficiary in the NDMB of SBI
2. SWIFT Code of NDMB (SBININBB104)
3. Name of the Beneficiary (your organisation)
4. Name of the Donor/Remitter
5. Account number of the Donor/Remitter
6. Donor/Remitter’s Address
7. Donor/Remitter’s Country of Residence
8. Donor’s nationality (if individual)
9. Purpose of donation under FCRA

The first five items are standard for any foreign inward remittance. The other four are especially advised by FCRA Department. These are needed for all foreign inward remittances, whether it is in rupees or in foreign currency.

You will also need to know the donor’s nationality and purpose of donation for reporting in FC-4. Once a remittance lands at SBI NDMB, the bank will send an email and SMS to you. You should then go to the local SBI branch where you had initially submitted your papers for opening the account. Here you should submit signed copy of a FEMA declaration along with following information:

1. Purpose of donation (as per FCRA classification)

2. RBI code for foreign inward remittance (P1303)\(^{48}\)

The local branch will forward the FEMA declaration to SBI NDMB (email: fcra.00691@sbi.co.in). Once the amount is credited to your SBI FCRA account, you can transfer it to your other FCRA Account. The SOP is silent on whether this can be transferred to an FCRA utilisation account, though this is clearly provided in second proviso to sec. 17(1).

Online transactions are usually not permitted on FCRA Bank accounts. However, to make it easier for you to manage your SBI NDMB account, FCRA Dept. has permitted internet banking on SBI NDMB account, with full transaction rights.\(^{49}\)

b. Rupee Donations

Contributions received from foreigners living in India (PIOs, foreign citizens, etc.), or from other foreign sources (e.g. CSR donations from subsidiaries of foreign companies or foreign MNCs, grants from Embassies) may come from Rupee-accounts with a bank in India. These should also be deposited in SBI FCRA Account. If SBI asks you to confirm the foreign source status, you may need to provide additional information (name, address, passport number, citizenship of donor) or a confirmation on your letterhead.

c. Currency Deposits

Similarly, if a foreigner gives you a donation in foreign currency or traveller’s cheques, you should deposit this in your SBI FCRA account. As SBI allows multi-branch banking, the deposit can be made wherever you had submitted your account opening forms for the SBI FCRA account. If SBI asks you to confirm the foreign source status, you may need to provide additional information (name, address, passport number, citizenship of donor) or a confirmation on your letterhead. If the donation is in Indian currency, it may be simpler to record it in your FCRA cash book and use it for regular expenses.

d. Other Credits

Most other FC receipts (such as interest, refunds, collection of micro-credit loans, sale proceeds of FC assets, etc.), can be

---

\(^{48}\) P1304 if you are a Government organisation

\(^{49}\) Para B(vi) of FCRA SOP dated 20-Nov-2020
.deposited in your SBI or non-SBI FCRA account (see ‘FCRA Banking Matrix for Deposits’ above). If you have withdrawn excess funds for some reason (or want to cancel a bank draft issued from FCRA funds), you should ideally take these to the bank from where you withdrew the funds in the first place.

However, each deposit is often a struggle with banks asking you to prove that the funds are foreign contribution. Usually a confirmation on your letterhead, with details of the source, etc., is enough to convince the bank. If the amount is large, you may need to submit an audit certificate or the transaction trail as well.

e. Inter-bank Transfers

Transfers between SBI FCRA account, other FCRA account and the FCRA Utilisation accounts are permitted. However, the utilisation accounts cannot be used for ‘keeping' foreign contribution. Therefore, you should only transfer funds needed for program activities to the FCRA utilisation accounts.

6. Surrendering your FCRA

FCRA 1976 did not have a specific provision for cancellation of FCRA. It only allowed the Government to place a registered organisation on prior-permission, which effectively meant that they no longer had a valid registration. FCRA 2010 has special provisions for suspension and cancellation. And for what happens afterwards. This is part of a curious development in charity regulation reflecting the increasingly uneasy relationship between Charity and the State (see box: ‘Coup de grâce for Charity?’ on page 27).

The cancellation provisions have now been extended further through a new one for surrender. To some extent, this is a formal recognition of an existing practice, where NGOs could write to FCRA Department and give up their FCRA registration voluntarily. These cases were called ‘cancellation on request’. Under the newly introduced sec. 14A, an NGO can apply for surrender of FCRA registration. The Government can permit this after an enquiry, provided two conditions are fulfilled:

1. The NGO has not violated any FCRA provisions; and,
2. The foreign contribution and assets created out of these have been vested in the Government.

Thus, the contribution and assets will pass into the custody and management of the Government even if no violation of FCRA provisions is found. This is a very unusual approach and shows that the Government is deeply reluctant to permit any unsupervised use of endowments or infrastructure created out of foreign contribution.

50 Sec. 14A of FCRA 2010
51 Vesting doesn’t have a fixed meaning in law, though it is different from seizure or confiscation, used elsewhere in the Act. In the present context, it seems that vesting does not confer absolute rights over the property, but only a duty to manage it as best as possible in public interest. See Fruit & Vegetable Merchants Union vs. Delhi Improvement Trust, AIR 1957, SC 344, 353.
52 Sec. 15(2). Assets/funds vest in the Addl. Chief Secretary or Principal Secretary (Home) of the State/UT, where the assets are situated. (F. No. II/ 21022/23(43)/2018-FCRA-III; S.O. 5650(E), dated 5-Nov-2018)
Complications

However, this can create complications in some cases. For example, a mission hospital might have been constructed partly out of foreign contribution and partly out of other funds. Sec. 14A mandates that the Government must take over the FC part of the hospital. It should then run this even if there has been no violation of FCRA. This will tie down Government resources in activities that are easily performed by the private sector.

There is the added complexity of minority educational institutions. These are protected under Article 30 of the Constitution, which allows minorities to administer these on their own. Any action of taking these over on cancellation or surrender of FCRA will not be easy. It will probably be defended vigorously all the way to the Supreme Court and thence maybe to international fora as well.

The Last Temptation

Challenging sec. 14A in court may be fine, but you should avoid the temptation to alienate your FCRA assets before surrendering FCRA registration. These cannot be given away to NGOs which do not have FCRA. These cannot also now be given away to NGOs which have FCRA. You can sell the assets at fair market value, and then keep the funds in FCRA Bank account or use them up for programs. However, ensure that this transaction is at fair market value and is properly documented. Else you will face problems during the scrutiny that occurs on surrendering the FCRA.

If you wish, you can also ‘sell’ these to yourself by paying the fair market value for these out of non-FCRA funds. This will allow you to continue using these after surrendering your FCRA registration. If you plan to do this, get independent advice from your auditors/lawyers to make sure the transaction is not challenged later.

Form FC-7 for Surrender

Form FC-7 has been introduced on 10-Nov-20 for surrendering FCRA registration. It’s a very simple form, asking for basic information about the organisation. A listing of all bank accounts used for FCRA funds (SBI Account, other FCRA Account, Utilisation Accounts) is also required. The form is already available online for filing.

The surrender of FCRA will become effective only when the Central Government approves it.

7. Identity Parade: Aadhar and Darpan

All FCRA NGOs will now have to provide the Aadhar number of each key functionary while applying for registration, prior-permission, renewal or even change of functionaries. And if a person cannot get Aadhar because they are not resident in India, they must provide their Passport number or the OCI card number.

With this change in place, the Darpan ID has also become mandatory for all FCRA NGOs. If an NGO has not already recorded its Darpan ID in the FCRA system, it should do so now. Quoting of Darpan ID is now compulsory for all FCRA forms except FC-1 and FC-2.

This is an administrative change, which was actually introduced some three years ago, but had hit a road block (see box: ‘Mirror, Mirror on the Wall’). Most of the FCRA NGOs have already obtained a Darpan ID. Those who haven’t should obtain it as early as possible. After getting the Darpan ID and Aadhar for all their board members, they should seed this information in FCRA system during filing of FC-3A,B,C or by filing FC-6E.

One problem that some NGOs had faced last time was listing at least three officers for getting a Darpan ID. However, while societies typically have 3-5 office bearers, many trusts and sec. 8 companies have only two trustees or directors. Niti Aayog, which runs the Darpan portal, should try and fix this problem, so that... such NGOs do not have to list their drivers and office assistants as officers, just to get a Darpan ID. People should also not place their proxies on the Board\textsuperscript{55} to get around the restriction of being a public servant, while also simultaneously drawing remuneration from a foreign source or an FCRA NGO. Remember always that FCRA is an internal security legislation and it should not be toyed with.

Once the linking of Aadhar and Darpan IDs become fully operational, it will become easier to enforce FCRA provisions even more forcefully. Enforcement aspects include operating bank accounts without being listed as key functionary in FCRA records, engagement as public servants, not disclosing prosecutions, involvement with multiple NGOs, and numerous other subterranean connections which the Aadhar’s neural network can identify and force to the surface. It is therefore critical for each NGO to do a risk assessment as early as possible and fix any lapses.

Though most NGOs have nothing to hide, there are many board members who do not want to expose their personal or business transactions to regulatory scrutiny or to public gaze. These persons are likely to disengage from FCRA NGOs over the next few years. Will this be good or bad? It is probably too early to say.

8. More Suspense during Suspension

As mentioned above, FCRA 1976 had no provision for cancellation or suspension of FCRA registration. FCRA 2010 has both these facilities. However, this has not made life easier for FCRA Department. If you enforce any law more rigorously, you also generate more resistance to enforcement.\textsuperscript{56} One of the unexpected results has been increasingly sophisticated attempts at concealment as well as a more robust defence against prosecution. Number of consultants and experts helping NGOs with complicated legal cases has also increased. Presumably all this has increased the workload of FCRA Department, which therefore needs more than six months to investigate suspected offences before cancellation can be ordered, or in rare cases, suspension withdrawn.

The changed provision of FCRA increases the permissible period of suspension from six months to 360 days, just five days short of a full year. During this period, the NGO cannot receive any foreign contribution. It cannot also use any foreign contribution it has already received — except upto 25%, with the prior approval of FCRA Department. This cap of 25% has remained unchanged, though the period of suspension has been doubled.

By all standards, this is an unusually long duration. Compare this with the 90 days within which a chargesheet must be filed under Criminal Procedure Code or under PMLA.\textsuperscript{57} Even \textsuperscript{55} This unfortunate practice is quite common among shady companies, often used for money laundering or cheating the public. As a result, many rickshaw pullers and daily wage workers have become company directors, without their knowledge or consent.

\textsuperscript{56} It is instructive to compare the arming of police in Europe, especially Britain, with that in the USA. While the former still rely on sticks, batons and shields, the latter routinely carry equipment which will be more fitting for storm troopers in Europe.

\textsuperscript{57} Prevention of Money Laundering Act, 2002
UAPA, often called a harsh law by Civil Rights groups, requires that a chargesheet must be filed within 180 days or the suspect be released. To extend this duration, police have to approach a court which may or may not allow additional time to the investigators.

As discussed above, the more charitable explanation for this is the change in complexity of violations and the enhanced ecosystem of FCRA consultancy. There could be another, less justifiable reason. Suspension of FCRA registration is very much like cancellation. A one year-period, without funds, is enough to dry out any organisation. From the enforcement point of view, there is also an added advantage — FCRA does not have any specific provision for appealing against a suspension order.

9. Prior-permission

A prior-permission under FCRA is like a temporary license. An NGO without FCRA registration can apply and get advance permission for accepting foreign contribution from specific donor/s, for a specific project. The amount is also specified in the permission. This is useful for NGOs which haven’t completed the three-year gestation period and are not eligible for getting FCRA registration. Generally, only small amounts are approved, though there are cases where people received approval for Rs. 10-12 crores.

Prior Permission > Rs. 50 lakh

Over the last few years, FCRA Department has become more and more cautious about this route. In March’19, the Department had introduced capping of prior-permission amount to Rs. 50 lakh for NGOs which hadn’t completed three years. This was done by asking NGOs to submit three years’ audited accounts (at the time of applying for prior-permission) if the project amount was over Rs. 50 lakhs. The requirement has now been dropped. Therefore, NGOs with larger projects need not wait for three years before applying for prior-permission.

Instalment Plan for Larger Cases

However, a different mechanism has been introduced. If the amount of foreign contribution is over Rs. one crore, then the contribution must be received in two or more instalments. To receive the second or later instalment, the NGO must submit utilisation details of 75% of the funds it has received. The department will then ask for a field inquiry of how the money has been used, before the next instalment can be released. Sometimes, if the amount is over Rs. One crore, the FCRA Department may also ask the NGO to set up a web-site.

Eligibility Conditions

A commitment letter from the donor must be submitted with the application for prior-permission. This must be specific for each donor, project and amount. The purpose should also be clearly mentioned. In addition to this, the NGO should ensure that:

58 Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act, 1967
59 Form FC3B revised with effect from 10-Nov-2020
60 Rule 9A, effective 10-Nov-2020
1. Its Chief Functionary is not an employee, consultant, volunteer, trustee, member or adviser of the donor agency.

2. At least 75% of the NGO’s board members are not members or employees of the donor agency.

3. If the foreign source is an individual donor, he/she is not Chief Functionary or a member of the NGO. Further, at least 75% of the NGO’s board members are independent of the donor — that is they are not family members or close relatives of the donor.

The NGO should open the FCRA Bank Account with SBI and mention the number in FC-3B. If it already has another FCRA account with a different bank, this should also be listed.

Fee for prior-permission has now been raised to Rs. 5,000. An affidavit in form AA from each key functionary listed in the application should be submitted. The term key functionary includes all board members as well as head of the organisation (CEO, Executive Director, etc.).

Revoking Prior Permission

There is no provision for suspension or withdrawal of prior-permission. The present change fixes this tiny breach in the Great Wall of FCRA. Now the government can suspend prior permission after holding a brief inquiry. During the period of suspension, the NGO cannot receive or utilise any foreign contribution without additional and prior approval of the FCRA Dept. Later if it is found that there has been a violation of FCRA, the Government can confiscate any remaining amount of foreign contribution, apart from barring any further receipt.

10. FCRA Registration

After reading all the above, if you still want to apply for FCRA registration, you should open an FCRA Bank Account with SBI and mention the number in FC-3A. If you already have an SBI FCRA Account, then this and any other FCRA account with a different bank should be listed. Application fee for FCRA registration is now Rs. 10,000. An affidavit in form AA from each key functionary listed in the application should also be submitted. The term key functionary includes all board members as well as head of the organisation (CEO, Executive Director, etc.).

In the past, FCRA Department used to apply several tests informally. These are now hard coded in rule 9.

- The NGO should have a track record of three years. This means it should have been registered at least three years ago.

- It should have spent at least Rs. 15 lakh over the last three years on activities for which it is seeking registration.\(^{61}\) The NGO can also offer the amount spent on fixed assets as part of the rupees 15 lakh threshold.

\(^{61}\) Rule 9(1)(f)(i) read with sec. 12(4)(b)
In addition to this, it is a good idea for the NGO to ensure that:

1. Its Chief Functionary is not an employee, consultant, volunteer, trustee, member or adviser of any foreign source.

2. At least 75% of the NGO’s board members are not members or employees of any foreign source.

Though sec. 12(3) talks about FCRA Department giving FCRA registration ordinarily within three months of application, this is very rare. Actual time taken is more like 6-18 months. Meanwhile, you should not assume that the permission or registration has been automatically granted just because you haven’t heard anything from the Department.

11. Exempt Government Entities

From Jul-2011 to Jan-2020, many Government entities were exempt under an order dated 1-Jul-2011. This order, issued under sec. 50 of FCRA, was enlarged slightly and constricted greatly in January 2020. Under the revised order, an organisation is exempt from FCRA only if it meets all the three conditions below:

1. It is constituted or established by or under a Central or State Act or order.
2. Its accounts are compulsorily required to be audited by the CAG or its agencies.
3. It is wholly owned by the Government which has set it up.

First condition has been enlarged slightly to include organisations set up under an order as well. Government organisations formed or registered under a general statute (such as Societies Registration Act or Companies Act) do not meet this condition. Only those which are set up or established by the Act itself are eligible. This leaves out most Government NGOs. The second condition has remained unchanged.

It is the third condition which is quite difficult to fulfill. For example, most IITs, IIMs, Universities meet the first two conditions. However, these are autonomous bodies and are not owned by the Government. Therefore, these are not exempt. Similarly, Municipalities or Municipal Corporations are not exempt under this notification as the Central or State Government does 62 This requirement is applicable for prior-permission cases. However, in practice, the FCRA Department sometimes uses the same rules for registration cases as well.

63 S.O. 459(E)—Whereas the Central Government is of the opinion that it is necessary and expedient in the interest of the general public to exempt organisations (not being a political party), constituted or established by or under a Central Act or a State Act or by any administrative or executive order of the Central Government or any State Government and wholly owned by the respective Government and required to have their accounts compulsorily audited by the Comptroller and Auditor General of India (CAG) or any of the agencies of the CAG, from the operation of the Foreign Contribution (Regulation) Act, 2010 (42 of 2010);

Now, therefore, in exercise of the powers conferred by section 50 of the Foreign Contribution (Regulation) Act, 2010 and in supersession of the Order of the Government of India in the Ministry of Home Affairs published in the Official Gazette vide number S.O. 1492(E), dated the 1st July, 2011, except as respects things done or omitted to be done before such supersession, the Central Government hereby exempts all the said organisations from the operation of all the provisions of the said Act with effect from the date of publication of this order in the Official Gazette.

F. No. II/21022/23(37)/2019-FCRA-III; Gazette Notification dated 30-Jan-2020 not have ownership of the properties or the municipalities themselves. Further, though the Government has to power to dissolve these, these are not owned by the government. In most cases, the property vests temporarily with the Government, till the body is reconstituted.

In addition to the above notification, some organisations have been exempted through executive orders under sec. 50. If you come across a government organisation that claims exemption under the above notification or under sec. 50, verify the claim thoroughly. Also keep in mind that:

1. An organisation registered under FCRA cannot regrant FCRA funds to an exempt Government organisation, as the restrictions under sec. 7 are still applicable to the donor organisation.

2. A foreign source (not registered under FCRA) can give foreign contribution directly to an exempt organisation based on the above.

3. An exempt Government organisation can regrant foreign contribution to others, as sec. 7 will not apply to it in most cases.

Finally, an attested copy of the FCRA exemption order and a confirmation that it has not been revoked should be taken on record before you give them any foreign contribution.

12. Political Activities

A large number of organisations were notified as organisations of a political nature under the 1976 Act. Such organisations cannot accept any foreign contribution at all. This provision has been retained as Sec. 5 of the FCRA 2010, which also provides detailed procedure for designating an organisation as such. Additionally, rule 3 lays down guidelines for declaring an organisation as being of a political nature. Though no organisations have yet been notified under this rule and section, the rule itself is rather poorly drafted. It was therefore challenged by INSAF, and was partially read down by the Supreme Court. The Government has now modified rule 3 to reflect this ruling:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Original Condition</th>
<th>Additional Condition</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>(i) organisation having avowed political objectives in its Memorandum of Association or bylaws</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(ii) any Trade Union whose objectives include activities for promoting political goals</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(iii) any voluntary action group with objectives of a political nature or which participates in political activities</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

64 The FCRA Department has not put out a general list of all the organisations exempted by an order.

65 See May-1998 list at DevelopAid (http://www.developaid.org/wp-content/uploads/2020/12/Organisations-of-Political-Nature-RBI-List.pdf). Some of these might still be on the list, whereas the orders might have been revised in some other cases.

66 Indian Social Action Forum (INSAF) vs. Union of India (Supreme Court, 6-Mar-20)
Essentially this means that an organisation cannot have its FCRA taken away under this rule just because it is an organisation of farmers, youth, students, etc., unless it is also into ‘active politics’ or ‘party politics’. The same condition has been added for organisations which take political action in support of public causes.

The rule offers some relief to NGOs which were fearful of an over-broad interpretation of clause (vi) in particular, and allows them to organise demonstrations or protests like dharna (sit-in) or rallies. However, the phrase ‘active politics’ remains ambiguous, and the word ‘politics’ itself remains undefined.

13. Approval for Changes

FCRA Department requires at least five types of changes to be intimated to it online within 15 days:

1. Name or address (FC-6A)
2. Nature, aims or objects (FC-6B)
3. Designated bank account (FC-6C)
4. Utilisation bank account (FC-6D)
5. Office bearers or key functionaries (FC-6E)

As rule 17A uses the word ‘intimate’ it has long been beloved that filing the form is sufficient compliance. However, the Department has now modified the rule by adding that any change shall be effective only after final approval by Central Government. This applies to all the five type of changes above, not just to those intimated in form FC-6E.

14. Revised Forms

All the old forms have now been replaced with revised ones.
FC-1

This form is an annual return of contribution in kind. It should be filed by 31-December each year (extended to 30-Jun-2021 for FY 19-20). There are no changes in the form except that Aadhar number is now compulsory. It has three different parts, which should be filled by different types of receivers:

- Part A & B - if you are an individual and have received a remittance, article or securities of over Rs. 1 lakh during the financial year from a relative who holds a foreign passport.
- Part B - if you are an entity with FCRA registration/permission and have received any articles or securities from a foreign source (irrespective of its value)
- Part C - if you are a candidate for an election and have received any foreign contribution (money, material or securities) in the six months before you filed your nomination papers.

FC-2

This form is for prior-permission to accept foreign hospitality. This requirement applies to individuals in sensitive positions. It should be filed online well before any foreign trip sponsored by a foreign source. There are no changes in the form except that Aadhar number is now compulsory.

FC-3A

This form is for obtaining FCRA registration which allows acceptance of foreign contribution on a regular basis. Registration is given for five years at a time. There are only minor changes in the form, apart from Darpan ID which is now mandatory.

FC-3B

This form is for obtaining prior-permission to accept foreign contribution for a particular project. There are only minor changes in the form, apart from Darpan ID which is now mandatory.

FC-3C

This form is for obtaining renewal of FCRA registration. There are only minor changes in the form, apart from Darpan ID which is now mandatory.

FC-4

The new form is effective from FY 19-20 itself, if you have not filed it before 10-Nov-20. Last date for filing the form is 31-December each year, but has been extended to 30-Jun-2021 for FY 19-20.

67 Items valued up to Rs. one lakh, received as gift for your personal use, are not treated as foreign contribution.

68 Applicable to MPs, MLAs, MLCs, Councillors, Panchayat members, people holding an office in a political party, Government employees, employees of Government corporations/companies, or universities/institutions owned or controlled by the Government. Government includes both state Governments as well as Central Government. Not applicable to journalists, public servants or media persons, who are not otherwise in the restricted list as Government employee, etc. Sec. 6 of FCRA.
Foreign contribution received from local sources (i.e., as second or subsequent recipient) need not be shown separately — instead all foreign contribution should be shown as one figure in item 2(i)(c). This should include contribution in kind as well as in cash. Purchase/construction of new fixed assets should be included in project-wise expenditure in table 3(a) and then detailed separately in table 3(b) as well.

Foreign contribution transferred to other organisations should not be included in project-wise table 3(a). It should instead be reported in table 3(c). This should include contribution in cash as well as in kind (material, assets or securities). Transfer of contribution to others was permitted only till 29-Sep-2020. If you’ve transferred any foreign contribution after that, it will be a violation — even if you do not list it here.

The form asks you to list all your FCRA Bank accounts under three separate categories: SBI FCRA Account, another FCRA Account, and all FCRA Utilisation Accounts. This seems to be the main reason why FCRA Department has extended the due date for filing FC-4.

A new compliance section consisting of 15 questions has been added towards the end. Each should be answered in ‘yes’ or ‘no’. ‘Yes’ means a violation and must be described briefly in 500 characters. Most of the questions are relatively simple. Others are explained below:

Q i: Transfer of FC to FC Organisations

You can say ‘yes’ for FY 19-20 and 20-21, as this was permitted till 29-Sep-20. Also say ‘Transferred before 29-Sep-2020’ in the explanation box, if you’ve transferred only till 29-Sep-20.

Q ii: Transfer of FC to non-FC Organisations

You should say ‘yes’ if you’ve transferred FC to a non-FC organisation. This includes exempt entities such as PM CARES Fund.

Q v: Domestic Contribution

Do not confuse this with contribution received from a foreign source within India. Say ‘yes’ only if you’ve deposited contribution from a non-foreign source in an FCRA account.

69 Form FC-1 (part B) should filed separately for this before 31-December each year. This year, the date is extended to 30-Jun-21.

70 Or as a separate line item for assets which are not project specific 71 This will result in reducing the amount available for administration in 19-20 even further, as grants made to others will be excluded from total FC utilised.

72 The following information is provided on PM CARES Fund website (FCRA notification not available in public domain):

“Q.23 Whether Foreign Donation is accepted in PM CARES Fund?
Yes. PM CARES Fund has received exemption from operation of all provisions of the Foreign Contribution (Regulation) Act, 2010. Foreign Donation is accepted from individuals and organizations based in Foreign countries through Foreign Credit / Debit Cards and also through Wire Transfer/SWIFT following the link on Home page of PM CARES Fund portal.

Donation in foreign currency can be made to PM CARES A/c in State Bank of India, New Delhi Main Branch, A/c No. 39239654818, IFSC-SBIN0000691, SWIFT Code-SBININBB104.”

Q 10: Admin Expenditure over 20%
You can say ‘yes’ for FY 19-20 and explain that it was within the 50% limit applicable for FY 19-20. For FY 20-21, there is no option for splitting your administrative expenses into two segments and apply 50% limit to one and 20% to the other. You should make sure administrative expenses for the entire year remain within 20%.

Q 12: Sale Proceeds of FC Fixed Assets
These must be deposited in the FCRA Account. This can be the SBI FCRA account or ‘another FCRA Account’. These should not be deposited in the FCRA Utilisation Accounts.

Q 13: FCRA FD Liquidation
These funds must be deposited in the FCRA Account. This can be the SBI FCRA account or ‘another FCRA Account’. These should not be deposited in the FCRA Utilisation Accounts.

Q 14: Managing Other Associations
This question is designed to identify organisations which are using FCRA registration of other entities. You should say ‘yes’ only if a third-party entity is managed by you or is being provided financial support indirectly out of FCRA funds.

Q 15: FC Utilised Outside India
You should say ‘yes’ only if some of your FC programs are taking place outside India. You should no say ‘yes’ if you have only imported services or goods for use within India.

FC-5
This form for permission to transfer FC to other non-FCRA entities has become redundant and has been deleted.

FC-6A
This form is for change of name, registration details or address (within the state). It must be filed within 15 days of the change. There are only minor changes in the form, apart from Darpan ID which is now mandatory. Any changes will not be treated as effective till the FCRA Department approves these.

FC-6B
This form is for change in objects or nature of the organisation. It must be filed within 15 days of the change. There are only minor changes in the form, apart from Darpan ID which is now mandatory. Any changes will not be treated as effective till the FCRA Department approves these.

FC-6C
This form is for change in designated FCRA Account with SBI or ‘another FCRA Account’. It must be filed within 15 days of the change. You will also have to file it after the SBI FCRA

---

73 In a literal sense, the question is not restricted to FCRA funds. If you are supporting other organisations with non-FC funds, you may say ‘yes’ and then clarify that only non-FC funds are being used to support other entities.

74 If you are shifting to a different state, you must file FC-3A again.
Account is opened. Any changes will not be treated as effective till the FCRA Department approves these.

FC-6D

This must be filed within 15 days of opening a new FCRA Utilisation account. There are only minor changes in the form, apart from Darpan ID which is now mandatory. Any changes will not be treated as effective till the FCRA Department approves these.

FC-6E

This form is for change in board members. It must be filed within 15 days of the change — even if it is for only one member out of several. There are only minor changes in the form, apart from Darpan ID and Aadhar which are now mandatory. Any changes will not be treated as effective till the FCRA Department approves these.

FCRA Department has also advised that people who are not filing for renewal in near future can use this form to update all the Aadhar numbers and Darpan ID.

FC-7

This is a new form for surrendering your FCRA registration.

Conclusion

Changes to FCRA (and to other NPO legislation) are a work-in-progress. It is, therefore, probably too early to come to a conclusion. The Government of a sovereign nation has every right to write laws and enforce them for the benefit of the nation. However, the design of FCRA is such that Government spends more time giving out registrations and permissions rather than checking how these are being used. The provisions themselves are often ambiguous, which makes it difficult for most NGOs to follow these. It doesn’t help that charity is recognised universally as a virtue — laws that restrict it are, therefore, baffling to most people. Experience shows that many people are willing to turn a blind eye to violation of a law that are not seen as morally reprehensible.

Nevertheless, in an increasingly contested world, FCRA is unlikely to see a 1992-like liberalisation till foreign contribution becomes comparatively insignificant in the scheme of things. This could happen either because domestic philanthropy grows to stymie cross-border charity, or because FC-funded activities (and activists) become more domesticated. Till that time, FCRA NGOs should buckle down for a turbulent ride and follow the law as best as they can.
